THE POLYNESIAN.

Evening Prayer.

I come, to thee, to-night, In my lone closet where no eyes can see, And dare to crave an interview with thee, Father of love and light!

Softly the moonbeams shine On the still branches of the shadowy trees, While all sweet sounds of evening on the breeze Steal through the slumbering vine.

Thou gav'st the calm repose That rests on all-the air, the birds, the flower, The human spirit in its weary hour, Now at the bright day's close.

'Tis Nature's time for prayer; The silent praises of the glorious sky, And the earth's orisons, profound and high, To heaven their breathings bear.

If I this day have striven With thy blest Spirit, or have bowed the knee To aught of earth, in weak idolatry, I pray to be forgiven.

If in my heart has been An unforgiving thought, or word, or look, Though deep the malice which I scarce could brook, Wash me from the dark sin.

If I have turned away From grief or suffering which I might relieve, Careless the cup of water e'en to give, Forgive me, Lord, I pray.

And teach me how to feel My sinful wanderings with a deeper dart, And more of mercy and of grace impart My sinfulness to heal.

Father! my soul would be Pure as the drops of Eve's unsulfied dew; And as the stars whose nightly course is true So would I be to Thee.

Not for myself alone, Would I these blessings of Thee implore, But for each penitent the wide earth o'er, Whom thou hast called thine own.

And for my heart's best friends, Whose steadfast kindness o'er my painful years Has watched to soothe afflictions, griefs and tears. My warmest prayer ascends. Should o'er their path decline

The light of gladness, or of hope, or health, Be Thou their solace, and their joy and wealth, As they have long been mine. And now, O Father, take

The heart I cast with humble faith on Thee, And cleanse its depths from each impurity, For my Redeemer's sake.

Follies in Food. We take the following sensible extract from an article in Once a Week, by the well known Miss

Taking society all round, it appears that more young people are killed by mistakes about food than about anything else except air. The mistakes about food are so various, so opposite, that while we are ashamed of our ignorance, we may hope for a great saving of life when we grow wiser. "Doctor," said an American clergyman to the family physician, who was attending the mother, "do look at that girl's tongue." "Oh, father, I am very well," said the young lady, "as well as I always am." But the doctor looked at the tongue, and observed that it was just as white as every young person's tongue he looked at. "They are all alike," said he "Why! Why people must have more or less fever while they eat as young people eat here; and without proper exercise too." He criticised the American diet; which is not our business to do while we have so much to correct in our own. The young people in both countries suffer and die in much the same way; the Americans more and the English less; but both very unnecessarily. The mistake is the same, whether the diet be the same or different.

The mortality detailed by Dr. Farr relates, we must remember, to all classes. When we read of errors in diet, we usually think of the table of the rich, as we imagine them, and suppose that luxurious people are over-fed. In the first place this appears to be a mistake, by the testimony of physicians; and in the next, if it were true we need not dwell upon it, because the rich and luxurious must always be the smallest class of the English or any other people. It is enough to say that wise modern physicians have been heard to declare that English ladies are not, generally speaking, sufficiently well fed. They take enough in bulk, but not nutritious and reparative food. They would be more robust and less nervous if they lived more like ladies did in Queen Elizabeth's time, consuming more beef and manchet and (if earned by strong exercise, not otherwise) good ale. As for the late dinners which we are all so shocked at, they had better be called suppers. If the gentlemen do not take a substantial luncheon in the middle of the day, they ought; and the ladies do. They in fact dine with the children at one or two o'clock. The leg of mutton or cold beef then is their real dinner. They have tea at five or six, with or without children; and then, if they choose to call the eight o'clock meal dinner, they can; but it in fact answers to the supper of old days. A few spoonsful of soup, a wing of fowl or game, a plate of jelly J. C. Spalding. or cream, and ice or fruit afterwards, may be all very pretty, but it bears no comparison as a dinner to the mutton and pudding at two o'clock. Many gentlemen do make their real dinner at the nominal time; and hence the great amount of disease among professional men, and the rich merchant class in London. Now it is the stomach that gives way, and now it is the nerves. Paralysis knocks down one, choleraic disease carries off another and dyspepsia makes life a long misery to a third; and who can wonder, when that class of gentlemen breakfast early (if men of business in any way), and work their brains all day, without another proper meal, or perhaps any food at all, for twelve hours! The expenditure of alimentary material WINES AND SPIRITS, may be great in the kitchens of the rich-as in the making of the famous white soup in the Queen's kitchen-but the higher classes are not in this country over-fed.

The next class is nearer to reason in its ostensible practice than perhaps any other in the country. Three meals a day, with a small interlude, and at 5 QUARTER Casks and 10 octaves of Hennessey's nearly reasonable times, seem to promise well; and if one sort of citizen is better nourished than another, it is probably the ordinary man-of-business in town and country, who likes his joint and pudding at dinner, and the loaf of good home-made bread, with country butter and eggs at breakfast and tea. Yet there are drawbacks here. The wife is not complacent about her table, and her daughters do not eat as girls should; and her sons at times look critical. The fault here is, not in the theory, not EX RECENT ARRIVALS! in the hours, not in the tradesmen who supply the house, but in the cookery. Without incurring the The following choice assortment of grocer-house, but in the cookery. reproach of grumbling at one's own age of the world, or saying that " the former times were bet-ter than these," one may state the plain fact, that the custom of our country used to be for the housewives of all ranks to be responsible for the table at home, and to claim that responsibility as a matter of right-as a point of honor as well as of duty. To declare this is to say that the case is otherwise

PICTURE OF A MORMON. - Somebody has drawn a lively and truthful picture of a Mormon, when he styles him a living paradox. A Mormon says grace before a cotillion, swears in his sermons, selects a text indifferently from the Bible, the Book of Mormon, an almanac, or the President's Message, and is perpetually quarrelling for the sake of peace. He assumes dignities, but has not the slightest respect for them; and the effect of his piety is to put him on a par with the greatest reprodute of the time. In short, he is the Latter Day Saint; or, in other words, the last one you would think of calling a saint.
